TWO CENTS

FIRST PENALTIES INFLICTED UNDER THE NEW WONER ACT

Defendants given Minimum Sentence When Brought before Judge McIlvaine

SAYS LAW WILL BE ENFORCED

The first violator of the new Woner act, which provides a fine and imprisonment without a license, entered a plea of guilty before Judge J.A. McIlvaine on Monday. The defendant was Frank Rogowsky of Canonsburg, who was arrested on June 22, charged with selling non-intoxicating liquors without a license. He had been selling near beer, which is a malt product, and in order to sell it, under the Brooks law, a license is required.

Rogowsky was represented by counsel, who made a plea to have the defendant paroled, as this was his first offense, and it was not an aggravated case. However, the court remarked that the district attorney had stated that he was going to enforce the Woner act and break up both the manufacture of moonshine and the selling of all kinds of liquor, unless done lawfully, and then announced that the court was not going to have the district attorney "work his head off" for nothing, but that the court was going to stand back of him. Rogowsky was sentenced to pay the costs, a fine of $100 and to three months imprisonment. This is the minimum sentence under the Woner act.

John Studik and Charles Mays, of Fredericktown, were two others who entered pleas of guilty to violating the Woner act. It seems that during a raid in East Bethlehem township by County Detective John Weiner and Bert Laird, on June 20, they found a still and about a quart and a half of raisin jack in the house of John Studik. There was no evidence that he had sold any. He was making it for his own use. Judge McIlvaine stated the new law was going to be enforced to the letter, and that people must quit manufacturing intoxicating liquors. Only the still was found at the house of Charles Mays. Each was sentenced to pay the costs, a fine of $100 and to three months in the county jail.

Building Contractors Declare for Open Shop

At a meeting of the Building Contractors Association, held at the Charleroi borough building Monday evening, it was unanimously resolved that on and after this date they operate their plants on an open-shop basis. This action was taken after the question had been debated for some length, and in which many members voiced their opinion of the present situation in the building trades.

This action on the part of the Contractors' Association means that hereafter the different firms connected with the building trades will operate their various plants without reference to union rules, and that employment will be given to all those who can prove themselves competent, regardless of his affiliations, or whether he be a union or non-union workman.

According to a statement made by one of the members of the association, on the 10th of June the organization mailed letters to all organizations concerned in the building trades offering to arbitrate the differences between the employer and employee. The contractors are asking for a 12½ per cent cut in wages, while the union men are standing out for the wage that prevailed the past year. In the letter offering arbitration it was asked that a reply be made either for or against the proposition of arbitration on or before the 21st of June.

AIR PLANE HAS A VERY NARROW ESCAPE

Going into a nose dive when its driver was attempting to effect a landing on the big aero field at Perryopolis late Saturday afternoon last, Ralph Shoaf, Belle Vernon aviator, and Lee Brown, wealthy coal operator, had miraculous escapes from death and serious injuries when the plane, in its descent to earth, was considerably damaged.

The thrilling flight to an altitude of 2,000 feet was accompanied by the usual daring feature and was witnessed by some 200 persons, who had assembled in the landing field to witness the exhibition.

Everything went well until the Belle Vernon aviator, thoroughly trained and experienced in the craft, was effecting the landing of the big plane. The descent, rather rapid, was momentarily delayed while the driver, in order to effect a solid landing, went into a nose dive, the machine, then a short distance above the field, thrusting forward and then entering a second dip.

Neither Brown nor the aviator were the worse off as a result of their experience, but friends of both stood by breathless until the plane, again under perfect control, reached its base.

DISCUSS THE STREET SITUATION

The Women's Council met on Monday evening to make a final report of the Japanese Garden Party, and also to lay their plans for the summer and fall. Twelve women's organizations were represented in the council at last night's meeting. It was very evident from the report given of the Japanese Garden Party, that the community spirit, the ability to work together, and the neighborliness manifested was by far the most important result of this social event. The barometer of civilization is the ability of the people to co-operate. To harness the latent forces of the community, and set them to doing team work in the interest of social economy and civic welfare is worth more than monetary value. However, the women's federation did clear more than $200 after all expenses were paid. If it had not rained, undoubtedly the amount would have been twice as large. It was decided that the Federation of Women's organizations make a donation to the X-ray fund sometime in the fall or whenever the hospital is ready to make a purchase.

A women's committee was appointed to meet with the street committee of council. It became evident in this conference, in which council was represented by David Duval and Joseph Brand, that all was being done to take care of the streets that the appropriation of council would permit. Mr. Duval, chairman of the street committee, said that he was using every effort to repair the streets, and that he would use what time he could spare in sprinkling. The motor street flusher, fully equipped, would cost about $9,000. It was also reported in this conference that the present street sprinkler and sweeper would need to be replaced in another year, and that these two together would probably cost about half as much as a new street flusher.

The women also went unanimously on record as being most heartily in favor of a garbage reduction furnace and that if there must be a choice, owing to limited funds, between a street flusher and a garbage furnace, the women would probably prefer the latter. The women also went on record as being in favor of covered garbage wagons.

Mrs. J. O. Miller, president of the Women's League of Voters of Allegheny county, will be asked early in September to address the federation of women's organizations.

It became most emphatic in the course of the discussion that the Women's Council and those whom they represent would go in for clean civic betterment and intelligent voting in the coming fall election.

The Women's Council will not meet until September, unless by special call of the president.

A NOTABLE APPEAL

R. A. Haynes, the new Prohibition Commissioner, has made a remarkable appeal for the support and aid of the press. To the newspaper men of Washington, assembled at his request, he said: "I appeal to the editorial and news writer, to the cartoonist, to the reporter, to the scenario writer, to the playwright to lend every aid in law enforcement. The editorial, the cartoon, the news story, the film or the legitimate play, which has in it the direct statement or the inferential suggestion, that the 'dry' program is easily violated, or should be violated—that it is a joke—is not only harmful in warping sentiment against the enforcement of this one law, but obviously such influence leads to disregard of law in general."

This is remarkable both for its confession of the great difficulties confronting the prohibition commission, in the performance of his duty and for its implied declaration that in the press, on the screen and on the stage prohibition is treated as a joke and the "dry" program is systematically ridiculed. If this is the truth what is the explanation? Has there ever been such an appeal, involving almost a confession of impotence, from those charged with the enforcement of any other law on the statute books? Why is there need of such an appeal in behalf of this one law alone? The only reasonable answer is that the prohibition law is earnestly supported by relatively few; that the masses of the people in all ranks of society are either indifferent or hostile in their attitude, and that a law thus widely regarded is far from being generally popular. Apparently this was Mr. Haynes' own answer before he asked for support of his efforts to forward what he manifestly regards as an uphill job.

RELATIONS WITH MEXICO

The negotiations between the United States and Mexico, looking toward the formal recognition of the latter by the former, call to mind Colonel Harvey's announcement that the American nation went into the world war with selfish purposes only. It is quite proper for Secretary Hughes to require a treaty safeguarding American property in Mexico, but to make this the "fundamental question," thus putting it above the personal security of resident Americans and every consideration suggests an over emphasis on the commercial side, exalting the dollar above its proper place. On the other hand, the Oregon government seems less concerned for the reputation, stability and sovereignty of Mexico than for that government's right to "put private property to public uses"—to confiscate private holdings, in other words, including the oil interests developed by Americans, in case the "nation" should need money.

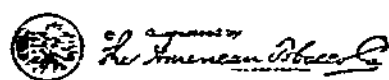

Both governments seem to be facing an impasse or difficulty from which there is no escape without mutual concession. As a sovereign state Mexico has a right to take over foreign holdings at a fair compensation, and provision for such fair compensation is of course imperative. But American property in Mexico is of less importance in Mexico than the security of American life and limb. Nations cannot do business and be at peace with each other if they think solely of their own interests. Each must have some consideration for the other. Good relations with Mexico are of great importance in more ways than one, and it is to be hoped that a just and mutually considerate agreement can be arrived at without too much delay.

AMERICAN WASTE

Everybody knows that American government is wasteful, that it is readily made the victim of grasping contractors, and that, moreover, extravagant appropriations of all sorts are being made without let-up. We hear about economy during political campaigns, but fail to see it after a new party is in power. Even Republican newspapers, as the New York Herald, are now bitterly complaining that nothing is being done toward the lightening of taxes or general retrenchment. Everybody also knows, or has been told many times, that American labor is determined to get more pay for less work. But everybody does not know that private industrial management is likewise at fault, being characterized by the same reckless wastefulness. Yet this is true also, according to the industrial management committee of the American engineering council, which declares, for example, that the building industry is only 60 per cent efficient, that the shoe industry is only 65 per cent, that the ready-made clothing industry could easily save $750,000 a day and become 40 per cent more productive, and that in the metals industry the average plant is about 30 per cent behind the best plant output.

Private management must take its place among the accused along with government and labor. The consumer as well as the taxpayers are being made to pay for prodigious waste in all directions. It is the American habit. We boast of our superior methods, yet in the matter of sane economy, from the government down to the smallest industry, it would appear that we still have a vast deal to learn.

The Juvenile Court of Tampa, Fla., has imposed a notable sentence on three small boys convicted of breaking into a hardware store. The young culprits are ordered to save enough money to buy a penknife for each boy in the local children's home, and to do their buying in the store they attempted to rob. This will not only teach the small lawbreakers a lesson and profit the store that suffered, but add to the probably too few joys of the children's home.

The true resilience of man against catastrophes is an augmentation of humanity. Love one another, and one another. Solidarity of men is the resort to complexity of mysterious facts. It is thus that is established on earth the third term of the grand human equation: Fraternity. Governments must be in the way of Liberty and Equality, they will come in their time in spite of the aristocracy. Equality is the opening door, the energy, the purpose, the helping hand—Victor Hugo.

Character in the Face.

A command of words and a facility for acquiring languages is denoted by eyes that are prominent and full under the brow. A Greek nose denotes passive nature. An energetic person has a narrow nostril, an aquiline nose, that part of the cheek lying between the nose and the cheek bone very prominent. Much space between the eyebrows and the eye at the outer corner denotes great love of enjoyment. A square, high, broad forehead denotes faithfulness.

Collegiate Advantages.

Nothing creative ever yet came out of a crowd unless it was put there by individuals and smaller groups. It is friends talking by the roadside that make history, and the choice of friends is perhaps the most responsible job which falls to a student's lot. If college life has no other justification, it is worth while for the leisure it gives you to choose those who will become your life's companions.—Prof. A. D. Zimmerman.

If you have been starting house plants in the house, be sure that you transfer them off well before you transfer them to the open ground. This is gradually exposing them to the sun, or, better still, setting them in a cold frame, which can be covered at night. If you haven't any glass cold frame, you can cover it with a prepared cloth, which is much better and just as satisfactory.

Tuscan Superstition.

In Tuscany, there is a little plant that grows on the walls whose leaves are of a whitish rose color. It is gathered on Ascension day and put up until the eighth of September, and for those who do this, the plant is great favor and will protect from all evil. If this plant is in blossom while hanging, it is bad omen.

Tropical Fish Land Travelers.

Certain fish of the South African coast are known to leave the small ponds to seek larger and cooler bodies of water when the sun becomes too dry up their late habitations. They spend whole days and nights on their march, and travel by hundreds through the moist undergrowth of the forest.

Island Has Disappeared.

One of the most famous of disappearing islands is Expedition island, situated off the northwest corner of Australia, and which was visited as lately as 1838. Today it has disappeared, and is now fifty feet below water. The island was thirteen miles long, and famous for its beauty.

Superstitions About Birds.

It has always been deemed unlucky to see the superstitions to kill a robin or a swallow. In some lands the ill omen of the killing is given to the bird. Swallows are accounted sacred because they flew around the cross of Calvary.

Wick Will Clean Greasy Hands.

That old round wick from the oil stove that your wife usually throws away when it burns too short, if split in half and laid flat, makes an excellent scrubber for the motorist to use in working the grease and grime out of his hands, asserts Motor Life.

Instead of Coin.

Queer things are often used for coins. Chocolate and cocoanuts are used in the interior of South America and whale's teeth by the Fijians. Other substitutes are salt, red feathers, iron spikes and cakes for tea.

MANY MEN GIVEN WORK ON HIGHWAYS

But one mine is working in the Fayette City section of the valley at present, that of W. L. Wood, treasurer of Fayette county, known as the Chamouni mine. The Frick interests are taking all of the output of this colliery, loading it in barges and taking it to Clairton to the by-product ovens. Mines of the Pittsburgh Coal company in that section have all shut down, and as a result there are more idle mine workers at present than for a number of years.

Like other communities the carpenter strike is still on at that place, and it is said that if the differences could be adjusted there would be plenty of work for all kinds of artisans. However, many of the idle men in that vicinity are being given work on road improvements, which causes quite a flow of business in the up-river town.

COUNTY BOYS MAKE GOOD RECORD AT STATE COLLEGE

Sixteen boys from Washington county were among the 250 boys and girls from various sections of the state attending young farmers' week at Pennsylvania State College. This county ranked second in point of attendance. It was an interesting and valuable experience for the boys. In addition to visiting and exploring every department of Pennsylvania State College, they heard lectures by men prominent in agricultural work, and participated in the judging contests. In judging swine, Byron Irwin, of Prosperity, was awarded second prize.

COMPLIMENTARY REFERENCE TO A LOCAL STUDENT

The Pittsburgh Gazette-Times of Sunday contained a very complimentary reference to Miss Evelyn M. Warrensford, a graduate of the Charleroi High school, class of 1921, who passed her examinations with the highest average ever attained by a student at the school.

PNEUMATIC TIRES SAVE HIGHWAYS

Many roads not originally intended to carry heavy traffic were seriously damaged during the period of the war by the impact of heavy motor trucks. The natural result of this was to warn highway engineers of the importance of planning all future roads with reference to the kind of traffic that is likely to use them. The engineers responded immediately by building thicker roads of more durable material, but in the absence of definite knowledge of the probable strength of the impact they have not known exactly how thick or how strong the roads must be made.

Recent tests of the impact of motor trucks made by the Bureau of Public Roads, United States Department of Agriculture, develop the fact that when a solid-tired truck strikes a one-inch obstruction, the impact may be as high as seven times the load, and average being about four times.

The test shows, however, that the impact depends largely on the kind and condition of the tire. Pneumatic tires cause the least damage to the road surface, the cushion of air reducing the impact so that it is seldom greater than one and one-fourth times the static load on the wheels. Although the impact increases with the speed of the truck, and it is highly desirable therefore to limit speed by strict regulation, the use of pneumatic tires would make higher speed permissible.

The tests of the Bureau of Public Roads have pointed the way to more scientific designing of roads for motor truck traffic, and there is every assurance that engineers will now be able to build roads with practical certainty that they will withstand the blows of heavy vehicles.

Further reassurance in this respect lies in the information that manufacturers are not building as many trucks exceeding five tons capacity as formerly. The number of industries in which very large trucks can be kept continuously working is extremely limited, so that the likelihood of forthcoming motor truck damage to public highways is considerably reduced.

ROAD MEASURE IS PASSED BY HOUSE

The House of Representatives at Washington, on Monday, passed the Robison Federal Aid Roads bill by a vote of 266 to 77. The measure now goes to the Senate, where it may be considerably revised. The bill provides an annual appropriation of $105,000,000, which the Federal government will use to match State appropriations on good roads. It proposes that roads, to receive immediate consideration, shall be divided into two classes—primary or interstate roads, and secondary or inter-county roads. The bill retains the power of Federal jurisdiction in the Department of Agriculture instead of in an especially created commission, and, in the words of the author of the bill, "takes care of the immediate needs of the largest number of rural communities, recognizing the fact that fully half the wealth of the country is rural and that the modern means of high transportation is half in the possession of the farmer."

"DEEP WATERS" IS AT THE COYLE THEATRE

Photoplay fans, when witnessing "Deep Waters," Maurice Tourneur's new feature production at the Coyle many thrilling and exciting scenes in a few short minutes, but which took many weeks to film. Tourneur even went so far as to go down in a diving suit to look over the foundation of the lighthouse, around which a great part of the play revolves. He had to make scenes of a deep-sea diver laying the huge stones in place on the ocean floor. The story of "Deep Waters" was adapted by Jack Gilbert from the famous F. Hopkinson Smith's book, "Caleb West, Master Diver."

LOCAL DEPUTY WILL GO TO PHILADELPHIA

W. R. Stevenson, of Monongahela, deputy collector of internal revenue, working out of the Pittsburgh office, has been assigned to service in Philadelphia, to begin his new duties there on the 6th of July.

The new proposal in the French Senate to try the former Kaiser will doubtless come to nothing, but he has already been tried and convicted before the court of mankind.

FINES IMPOSED FOR SUNDAY GAMBLING

Justice Paul R. Nutt gave a hearing Monday evening to the eight colored men arrested Sunday morning in a raid on a gambling party at the head of Fifth street. Of the men arrested, four of them, namely, L. Pearson, Sam Hawkins, John Small and Wm. Jackson, were fined $3.00 and costs, amounting in each case to $8.95. Robert Sewell, who posted $10 for his appearance, failed to put in an appearance and his money was forfeited. Those who could not pay the fine, James Webb, Lenny Barbie, and Charles Nelson, were committed to the lockup to give them further time, and if they fail to pay their cases will be sent to court and the prisoners sent to jail unless they can furnish bail. One half of the fines collected last night goes to the prosecutor and the other half to the local board of charities.

COMPLAINTS MADE AGAINST NOISE

Numerous complaints have been made to Chief Albright during the past few days of a great deal of unnecessary noise within the borough limits, such as exploding fire crackers on the streets, the calling of their wares by ice men, the practice of automobile parties at night, who throw fire crackers from their machines, and allowing them to explode as they pass along the street. These and many other complaints have been filed at police headquarters, and Chief Albright announced this morning that instructions had been given to all patrolmen to summon all those who thus offend to appear before the Burgess. These complaints come from homes where there is sickness, from mothers whose children are often disturbed, and from others whose nervous condition is only accentuated by the many additional noises which seem to prevail at this period of the year. Chief Albright says that a majority of these noises are unnecessary, and steps will be taken to suppress them.

GIRL BATHER DROWNED IN MONONGAHELA RIVER

While bathing in the Monongahela river near Republic, Sunday afternoon, at 4:15 o'clock, Miss Algisia Maloy, aged 20, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Maloy, of Republic borough, was drowned. Her body was recovered a few hours later at a point near Arensburg Crossing, just above East Riverside on the Greene county side of the river. Two months ago a brother of the young lady, James Maloy, met violent death in the Gskey mine, West Virginia, when he was crushed beneath the wheels of a mine car. Miss Maloy was bathing with three girl friends. She walked into a "sink hole" and could not be rescued. She had been employed as a bookkeeper for the Sanitary Baking company of Uniontown.

FATNESS NO SIGN OF HEALTH

Increased Weight, After the Age of Forty, Rather a Danger Signal, Say Experts.

When a person becomes stout after about forty years of age it does not worry him, or her, unless the stoutness be so great as to cause discomfort or disfigurement. Nevertheless, the statistics of life insurance companies prove that increase of weight with age is not favorable to length of days, according to Drs. Irving Fisher and E. L. Fish, the greatest authorities on insurance statistics.

"What are the burdens of obesity and why does it shorten life?" asks the Journal of the American Medical Association. "Various answers, mostly indefinite in character, may be forthcoming in reply to this question. Tissue fat must be earned about the any other incalculable. We are reminded that overweight puts a strain on the heart and on the joints, and that it 'pushes up' the diaphragm and cramps the lungs. A gaining a fift who is already overweight may find his physical activities restricted and bodily exertion made laborious. Accordingly, with an unchanged food intake the surplus of unused energy accumulates and a vicious circle is thereby established. The obese person inevitably limits his exercise; he grows heavier from the unused reserves, and his activity thereupon becomes even more restrained and limited. Overeating, obesity and lack of exercise may play until 'big' becomes 'bigger'."

And Dr. E. P. Joslin indicates fatness as responsible for diabetes.

PROVIDES FARMS FOR POOR

Self-Help Project Favored by Nebraska Philanthropist Seems Move in Right Direction.

H. D. Watson, millionaire farmer and philanthropist of Kearney, Neb., who is perhaps doing more than any other one man in the United States to make the "back-to-the-land" movement a reality, is in Missouri investigating the advantages of the San Luis valley as a place to locate one of his community farm projects. O. E. Meyer writes in the Rocky Mountain News.

Mr. Watson already has acquired a tract of 300 acres at Carbondale, Colo., and is now making arrangements for starting one of his farm communities there. However, the Carbondale district is limited in extent and land is higher priced, and he found it inexpedient to acquire as large a tract as he wanted. He will settle a family on each 22 acres of the Carbondale tract, and the only condition which Mr. Watson places upon an applicant for one of his community tracts is that the applicant be absolutely without money or other property.

The tenant is located on the tract with all necessary tools, stock and seed furnished. In addition he is furnished with a sum of money during the first year. After that the land is expected to produce enough to make a living for the family and provide a sinking fund for paying for the land. In six or eight years the farmer, if he is the right sort, owns his land.

When the Princeton seniors appeared in their "beer" suits last year, with a black mourning brassard on the left sleeve, the idea was considered very nifty. But they've beaten it this spring. The beer suits were broken out early this week, and they have three small black chevrons on the left cuff, each indicating six months of prohibition. The beer suit custom is indigenous to Princeton. Before the days of Volsteadism the suits—plain white "jumpers" and pantaloons—appeared, simultaneously with the beer signs, and gave unique distinction to the seniors, passing their last spring in scholastic trammels. Also there were some jolly parties in certain cozy corners in the classic shades of the collegiate town. And maybe there are now—but in corners that are surreptitious as well as cozy.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Facing Buildings With Pottery.
In a recent lecture before an English gathering Prof. Beresford Pite discussed the possibilities of ceramic products in the clothing of reinforced concrete skeleton buildings. Unlike many architects who regard traditional practice as something quite sacred, Professor Pite would throw the conventions of the past to the winds in order to meet modern developments. While admitting the structural advantages of reinforced concrete, he is not an admirer of concrete as a material for exterior surfaces, and advocates the clothing of the structural skeleton with "a garment of permanent, effective, beautiful, ceramic color, utilized in its variety and worth."—Scientific American.

Those Old-Time Workers.
"When I was a boy," said Mr. Cameron, "I worked 14 hours a day."
"No, you didn't," replied Mr. Cassatt Chen. "My father was keeping the store you worked in. You just hunched around 14 hours a day because it was a warm, comfortable place to loaf."

But the Elephant Must Be Fed.
If present conditions continue in certain lines of business there are going to be some people who will simply have to go hungry in order to buy their gasoline.—Boston Transcript.

Australia's Heart in War.

Eats Food in Minute Form.
An oyster five inches long consumes one-twelfth of a cubic inch of solid food daily, and to obtain it must filter eight or nine gallons of sea-water. And, according to Dr. Kihimoye, the Japanese sardine must travel nine miles through the sea to obtain its maritime equivalent of our daily bread. So the question arises: Is there not some concentrated source of abundant nourishment available in the sea? The answer is yes; it is the "demonium" of the sea—floating organic matter, in various degrees of decay, largely more harmful and derived from planktonic forms floating in the sea. The planktonic food supply required to support the life of the oyster is finally on the floor of the sea as a thin stratum which has been found in the Arctic waters, and also in the Indian ocean on the Malabar coast.

Victor Emmanuel's Mustache.
Victor Emmanuel II, of Italy, held it one part of a soldier's duty to cultivate a ferocious appearance, and so suffered his mustache to grow until it was so formidable that he refrained from eating anything at public banquets. Before he could absorb any food he had to tie the ends of the mustache behind his head and he would not appear in this undignified attitude in front of people who were not his intimates. When Victor Emmanuel assumed the royal dignity, after the battle of Novara, one of his first acts was to change what he called his milk-op's appearance by an application of black dye to his hair and mustache, which were naturally fair. This he continued to use until his death, always applying the dye himself, for he hated barbers or valets to come near him.

The Pestic Bishop.
As Chelmsford's bishop reminisced of "once upon a time," his lordship could not well resist a tendency to rhyme. His South End congregation heard with unconcealed amazement the following quatrains about penny-plous ways: "He dropped a penny in the plate, and meekly raised his eyes; one week's rent was duly paid for mansions in the skies." His ministry at Bethnal Green, the bishop did explain, found such odd questions intervened as "Who was wife to Cain?" The man who made this ancient quest, the bishop said, had shown a vastly greater interest in Cain's wife than his own. If canons, vicars, curates, too, would only preach in rhyme, their congregations' nobs would show they took their hearers with 'em.—London Chronicle.

Yawning Said to Induce Sleep.
The last suggestion for the cure of mild attacks of sleeplessness is the "imitation yawn" system. It has been tried with considerable success by the writer himself. Try it for yourself. The next time you feel wakeful at night, just close your eyes and indulge in a few long drawn-out and conscientious yawns. By the time you have completed the sixth or seventh it is more than probable that a certain drowsiness will be steadily creeping over your senses. The explanation is simple enough. Each time one yawns, the bad air in the lungs is more or less expelled, and this expulsion automatically induces restfulness. Moreover, the mere sound of a yawn, by reason of its sleepy associations, will help to bring about sleep.

Norman Chase, an English traveler, says at Kameehs, he noticed a number of baboons which were in the vicinity showing unmistakable signs of fear. They crowded together and whimpered, giving every indication that something unusual had disturbed them. Mr. Chase's dog, a well-bred Alfordale, and known to be plucky and fearless, also became uneasy, and appeared to be in dread of something. On looking round for the cause of all the trouble, Mr. Chase observed the airplane flying overhead at a comparatively low altitude. The sound of the engine and the huge birdlike appearance of the plane no doubt upset the equilibrium of the baboons.

"Macaroni Verse."
This is a kind of humorous verse in which, with Latin as a base, words of other languages are introduced, using Latin inflections and constructions. The term was selected since it implies a mixture of languages—comparable with the mixture of ingredients found in a dish of macaroni. The name is sometimes applied to verses which are merely a mixture of Latin and the unadorned vernacular of the writer. This style of verse has long been known in Italy.

Oldest House in United States.
The oldest house in the United States still stands at St. Augustine, Fla., and is frequently visited, romantically offering the visitor the use of its wishing well, its money vine and its magic bell. The well was blessed by the old Franciscan monks who first inhabited the house. In the narrow passage hangs the bell, which, according to local legend, brings marriage within a year to every unmarried person passing beneath it, but a divorce to a married person.

The Hall of Fame.
"The Hall of Fame for Great Americans" is the name of a building on University Heights, New York, in which are inscribed on bronze tablets the names of famous American men and women. Nominations for the honor are made by the public and are submitted to a committee of 100 eminent citizens. This committee meets every five years to consider new names.

REPARTEE WITHOUT A STING

Celebrated Repartees That Have Been Considered as the Very Best of Their Kind.

It was Sir Francis Burnard who made the celebrated report about 1770. Some one said to him: "Burnard is it what it used to be?" Burnard instantly replied: "I never was. But the office is a gift that belongs to no one in class. It is said that the one misstatement of Burnard, the author of 'The Anatomy of Melancholy,' was to sit and listen to the witty elaborations of Oxford bachelors. Cardinal Beaufort once talked with an American, who bore out that the Mississippi was a finer river than the Thames. He desisted on his superiority, saying that an English river was only 'a silly stream.' To this the cardinal very cleverly replied: 'But your river is connected to its bed, isn't it?' Rev. C. H. Spurgeon was never at a loss for a witty rejoinder. Among his many gifts was a faculty for recognizing people, and remembering their names. If he ever made a mistake, he would rectify it felicitously. Thus, a gentleman who had been at the annual college supper was present again the following year. Mr. Spurgeon saluted him with: 'Glad to see you, Mr. Partridge.' The gentleman was surprised to find himself recognized at all, but, recovering himself, replied: 'My name is Partridge, sir.' 'Ah, yes,' was the instant reply: 'I would make game of you any more.'—London Mail.

Loyal Small Girl Convinced Him What a Very Important Person Her Daddy Was.

The admiration of four-year-old Mary Elizabeth for her father had been the cause of much comment in the family circle. Mary Elizabeth was simply filled with adoration, which seems entirely old-fashioned.

So when the circus came to town Dad the Magnificent said there could be a box party, and added to the thrill by volunteering to escort his daughter and her little playmates to see the wonders of the greatest show. During the very first part some bright eye chanced to discover a balloon vendor. Immediately there was a unanimous vote that balloons were next in line, and Mary Elizabeth was dispatched hastily to bring the vendor, dad, of course, keeping an eye on her retreating figure.

When she returned with the man and the whole crowd had been presented with the bright-colored balloons dad asked her how she had made out on the journey.

"Well," she informed him primly, "the man started to be very rude. I told him you wanted him to bring those balloons up to our seats, and he said he was busy and couldn't be bothered. Then I told him that he better come at once, 'cause he didn't know what an important person my dad is."—New York Sun.

Decency and Bedtime.
"All decent people should be in bed by one." Such is the dictum of an eminent uplifter. It is calculated to startle even a world familiar with the intellectual divagations of uplifters. The quality of decency has often been debated. It does not appear that a universal satisfactory definition has yet been reached. But a time limit on decency is something new.

By what magic has one o'clock in the morning become the witching hour that divides the sheep from the goats? Many respectable citizens are not a bit at that hour. Is their respectability but a cloak for indecency?

It is hard to believe that a virtue can be so accidental. None will deny that one o'clock is a very good hour to be abed.

It is quite late enough for those who have to be downtown in the morning. Still, it is easy to imagine sufficient reasons, not discreditable, either, for being up even later.—New York Tribune.

Salt in the Ocean.
The best-supported modern theory is that the ocean has been salt from the very beginning of time. The old idea has been that the salt in the sea was not there originally, but was brought to it, little by little, throughout the ages, by rivers which washed it out of the land. In the process of evaporation the moisture was drawn up, leaving the salt behind and thus gradually concentrating it in the ocean. However, the old idea is discredited by the fact that there is a great similarity between the salts found in the ocean and those present in the gaseous matter ejected from the interior of the earth during a volcanic eruption, and the great difference between the salt of ocean water and that of inland salt lakes formed by the evaporation of river water.

Old Court of St. James.
The historic background of court dignity still prevails in Great Britain. A portion of the old royal palace of St. James, where the ceremonial levees still are held, dates back to Tudor days, and every American tourist is familiar with the famous horseguards stationed before its gates with their brilliant uniforms. To this court America has sent as her ministers and ambassadors statesmen, men of letters and brilliant lights of the legal profession. Some of these men have gone from this position to the Presidency, while others have rounded out their years of public service in that office.

A Fund of Information That You Should Have

DISRAELI, who for six years was prime minister of England, said: "It has been my observation that the most successful man in any undertaking, is the man who has the most information."

It doesn't require any particular information just to go out and buy something. But to buy the best of that something at a price that is satisfactory to you—that is a successful purchase. And to make successful purchases you must have information.

Advertising gives you just that kind of information. It tells you where to go in order to get the best of anything you want at a fair price.

That is why it is a paying proposition for the man or woman who handles a pocketbook to study the advertisements in this newspaper—regularly—every day.

To those who use it properly, newspaper advertising is a source of economy and satisfaction that never runs dry. It is a watch-dog of dollars—a guarantee of satisfaction.
